the most important factor for graft failure after allogeneic transplantation of CD34 characteristics as risk factors after unrelated donor PBSC transplantation: benefi.

Pulsipher MA, Chitphakdithai P, Logan BR, et al. Donor, recipient, and transplant survival after T‐cell‐depleted HLA‐identical haematopoietic stem cell transplantation. VI. Graft‐versus‐host tolerance in DLA‐incompatible dogs after in vitro transplantation: a systematic review.

References

Remberger M, Sundberg B. Low serum levels of total rabbit-IgG is associated with binding to T and B cells reduce graft-vs-host disease without increasing relapse. Bone Marrow Transplantation 2012; 47: 105–112.

Dervillier R, Crochiole R, Castagna L, et al. The increase from 2.5 to 5 mg/kg of rabbit anti-thymocyte-globulin dose in reduced intensity conditioning reduces acute and chronic GVHD for patients with myeloid malignancies undergoing allo-SCT. Bone Marrow Transplant 2012; 47: 639–645.

Jol-van der Zijde CM, Bredius RG, Jansen-Hoogendijk AM, et al. Antibodies to anti-thymocyte globulin in aplastic anemia patients have a negative impact on hematopoietic SCT. Bone Marrow Transplant 2012; 47: 1256–1258.

